

the notion

Welcome to the Notion by cabi, a magazine of style, opportunity & purpose.

Notions are the little details in fashion we love: the buttons, the bows, the beads, a perfect peplum, that hint of fur—the heart of glamour, the soul of chic. This book is our place to celebrate these details. Every page is filled with the latest trends and tips to help you express your true style.

But style is more than a mere detail, and a notion is bigger than a special touch. A notion is also a belief.

Our notion is about helping others discover their true style and reinventing the traditional shopping experience... together. It's about having the freedom to live the life we've always wanted. It's about doing well in order to do good. It's about giving, loving, learning, laughing. We're inspired by the women who uphold this notion—these beliefs—and we want to share their stories.

So sit back, relax, find something beautiful, feel something special, and embrace the little details...the big picture...the Notion.

This season's must-love hair is inspired by your natural texture: soft waves, tousled braids, and loose top-knots. Our women have changed the retail game. We've come together for a common purpose.

The year was 2001, and the world of retail had women leaving the mall deflated by the anxiety and inefficiency of endless, isolated browsing. Clothing designer Carol Anderson began wondering if there was a way to better serve women by giving them the focus, help, and guidance they desired. She had a devoted following of women across the country and thought if she could just circumvent the store process by providing full, unedited collections directly to the women she designed for, shopping would forever be changed.

At the same time, management consultant Kimberly Inskeep had the realization that there was a growing need to help women fulfill their desires for a more flexible career amidst the growing demands of life. As Carol and Kimberly talked about how women needed both a better way to shop and a better way to work, an idea surfaced. Could these two needs be met by one solution? They asked ten like-minded friends to brainstorm with them and, although they didn't know it at the time, they were quietly transforming the retail industry through what became the cabi Fashion Experience.

By bringing a uniquely styled clothing line to a home setting, women received an opportunity to hear about the hottest trends and discover their true style in the company of close friends. Our trained cabi Stylists transform that looming question of "What do I wear?" into an occasion to enter one's closet with a sense of boldness, confidence, and fun. Our customers build functional wardrobes that are so completely "them," while at the same time, supporting a woman as she builds a substantial career that lets her call her own shots.

During their early brainstorming sessions, there was one phrase Carol, Kimberly, and the ten cabi Founders kept in front of them as a source of inspiration: "... Affect lives through relationships." This became cabi's Creed. So much of retail is about just making another sale, and cabi set out to be much more than that. The opportunities to shop these days—whether online or at the mall—are endless, but the opportunity to form meaningful bonds between women is a unique part of the cabi Fashion Experience.

From 12 founding women to thousands of cabi Stylists today, it's official: Our women have changed the retail game. We've come together for a common purpose: Developing a culture centered on women helping women—serving rather than selling, collaborating rather than competing, and transforming not transacting.

This transformative spirit has caused a ripple of goodness that extends so much further than one community. Cabi's living legacy is not only the lives transformed in living rooms, but also the women's lives transformed around the world. Believing that true beauty is found when we live selflessly and give generously, The Heart of cabi Foundation is dedicated to serving and empowering women in need, providing entrepreneurial opportunities for women in developing countries in collaboration with Opportunity International.

From humble beginnings with a dozen visionaries to additional leadership joining the team to serve a vast network of inspired and empowered women, cabi's story is a story of connection. Together is how we can help one another, whether that's instilling a sense of exhilaration into the art of getting dressed or giving a woman the tools and confidence to start her own business. Our true style—whether in fashion or in life—is discovered when we're connected.

Somewhere between cutting her wedding cake and jetting off to a honeymoon in sunny Antigua, it hit her: Mara Riddle was leaving Utah. "My husband, Aron, works as a financial planner, and he loves his job. When the opportunity to advance his career came with the caveat of moving to Reno, there was no question we were going to take it." But the move made her nervous. "Our whole comfort zone, our friends, our network, our peoplethey're in Utah." Little did Mara know she was at the very beginning of an empowering adventure, one that would ultimately bring her closer to friends and family in spite of the many miles between them.

Arriving in Reno, the Riddles struggled to adapt to their new environment. "We really had to bulk up on our communication and partnership skills." One short year later, they were moving again. But this time the move was taking them further afield, all the way to the East Coast...all the way to Georgia.

"It was a big question mark for me. I was trying so hard to be his cheerleader, his support system, but I also didn't know what I was going to be doing there—what that would look like for me as a newlywed, not knowing a single soul in a new town for the second time." Not long after arriving in Georgia, Mara began working as a banker.

Mara was committed to putting down roots in Georgia, building a community, and recapturing the friendships she'd left behind. As she grew closer to both her coworkers and regular customers, there was one person in particular with the potential to be a best friend. That bank wearing a pair of white jeans

"The best thing about the season for me was this new network of women that supported me."

person was Georgia Hine.

Georgia was a regular customer of Mara's. "The first time we met, I immediately had the biggest friendcrush on her. It was like love at first sight, and a part of me just knew we'd be close." Every time Georgia came in, Mara would marvel at her spectacular sense of style.

One day, Georgia walked into the that Mara absolutely loved, and she finally built up the courage to ask how she had such great fashion sense. The answer seemed too good to be true. "I said, 'Let me get this straight: you roll a designer clothing collection into women's homes, give them styling ideas, and they all buy clothes?' A million light bulbs started going on in my head." Mara booked her first Fashion Experience

right there in the bank.

She invited everyone she knew, all her new friends from the bank, friends from around town. She even cornered her husband into inviting his co-workers and their wives. This was when everything began to change for the Riddles, when Georgia (the place) started to feel more like home... thanks in no small part to Georgia (the person).

"My husband and I feel so passionately about quality relationships. We wanted to rebuild the network we had in Utah. But in order to get that sense of comfort, we had to first get a little uncomfortable." Twelve women, who just months earlier had been total strangers, attended her Fashion Experience. Mara recalls sitting there as Georgia presented, thinking, "This is brilliant!"

A week later, Mara attended her first cabi Community & Career Gathering, and she began to see how she could build a community around a cabi business of her own. But at this moment in her life, she was already in school and banking full-time, and she wondered if she could have these three plates spinning all at once. She decided to give it a try, but not before consulting her husband.

Aron's advice was the same approach he took with his financial clients: "If you're gonna do cabi, I fully support you, but you have to commit to doing it for 5 years. In finance, if you're starting your own business you have to commit to it long enough to see the positive effects and not let the first year get you down." From then on, it was full steam ahead.

Mara apprenticed with Georgia in Fall 2013. During her apprentice season, she traveled back to Utah with the Collection and told everyone about her new business. One of those people was an old friend, Erica Baiden. The two had met 9 years earlier and remained close. Erica had since become a doctor working at a family practice in Utah, and she'd quickly learned the critical role that fashion played in her career.

"Patients form an impression of me based on my appearance before I even say hello. Cabi clothing gives me the look of confidence and competence needed to connect with patients, young and old."

When Mara showed up in Utah with cabi clothes, Erica was immediately hooked. "Mara has always had a knack for style, so all our friends were immediately onboard." Erica became a Hostess that season and has hosted for Mara ever since. "Hosting with cabi is easy. It's just simple snacks and inviting friends—the shows practically host themselves," says Erica.

But it wasn't just the fashion and time with her friends that Erica so deeply appreciated about hosting a cabi Fashion Experience. It was the opportunity to give back, a value that speaks deeply to her calling as a caretaker. "None of us even question when asked to round up [our order through Make a Change] or consider the more expensive piece; cabi's philanthropic efforts have been a huge part of why my friends and I keep on coming back. It has the power to reach so many people around the world and give them that same sense of confidence and self-worth that we get when wearing cabi clothing. Giving women the opportunity to have their own business through W.E. are cabi, and carry that confidence forth in their own countries, their neighborhoods, their towns—that's a truly special thing to support."

Mara had 27 shows her first season, and in the midst of all her success, she found out she was pregnant.

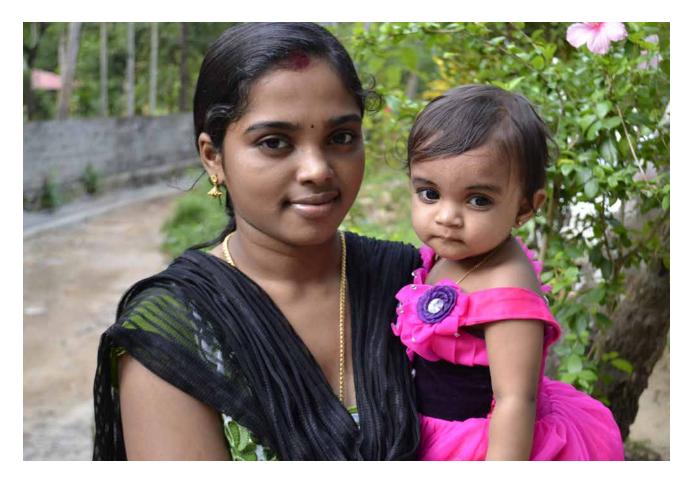

"I was nervous, coming off this Über successful season, knowing I couldn't keep a fourth plate spinning," recalls Mara. Between banking, school, cabi, and now motherhood, something had to give. "I didn't necessarily know my bigger purpose for doing cabi early on—I thought it would be fun, and I'd make friends—but then after my first season, finding out I was pregnant, I realized how the future could look: cabi and family."

With the arrival of a baby girl, she reveled in having a career that was so flexible. But even more than that, she loved who her career brought into her life. "The best thing about that season for me was this new network of women who supported me. Georgia helped throw my baby shower; the people I met through cabi had become my people." But Mara never forgot about her people back in Utah, and no matter how busy she got with baby Elsie, she always found time to host virtual shows over FaceTime whenever she couldn't fly back to host in person, keeping friends like Erica perfectly styled, no matter what. Perhaps the biggest fan of these virtual shows was Mara's mother, who joined as her first team member in Fall 2014.

"My mom and I look forward to sharing a room at The Scoop, and I travel to Utah once a season. Four times a year we have guaranteed mother-daughter time," Mara says. All the way from her new home in Georgia, Mara has been able to stay close with friends like Erica, deepen her relationship with her mother in Utah, and build a community in both places while supporting women around the world. That, Mara and Erica agree, is what makes the cabi Experience truly special.

WOMEN HELPING WOMEN AROUND THE WORLD

 $photography\ courtesy\ of\ Opportunity\ International$

We've all felt it—that restless feeling, wondering if our life is making any significant difference. It was that question that motivated cabi's Founders to carefully craft a business that would provide an opportunity to contribute to something bigger than themselves. They sensed other women would find cabi to be worthwhile. The more it included the transformative power of women helping women, the more they believed these connections would stir a ripple of goodness that would extend far beyond The cabi Experience.

The reach they envisioned deepens with each passing day. Today, cabi's efforts to impact women have spread well beyond living rooms, delivering transformation into the lives of women in the developing world, giving them a message of hope and freedom through entrepreneurship.

We proudly launched our W.E. are cabi Program in 2015, a one-for-one microlending program that connects our cabi entrepreneurs to entrepreneurs in the developing world through Opportunity International, a global nonprofit microfinance organization. As each cabi Stylist starts her business, we fund a small business loan for a woman building her own business, making them "sister entrepreneurs" growing their businesses together.

W.E. are cabi is the manifestation of our desire to "do well in order to do good." It was this sentiment that led Carol Anderson to create The Heart of cabi Foundation in 2005 as a meaningful counterpart to the opportunity we provide our women. "Cabi Stylists have the opportunity to realize their dreams through starting a business to support a better financial future for their families and communities. We are so proud to extend that transformational opportunity to women around the world," said cabi Chief Executive Officer Lynne Coté.

For women living in the endless cycle of poverty, a small business loan is an open door to a new lifea gift that affirms, "You are valuable, worthy, and have potential to build a life you had never dreamed of." Our loan recipients feel the liberating power of entrepreneurship, which gives them the ability to change the trajectory of their lives through for success' sake, but rather we seek a business filled with dignity and respect.

Based on our training philosophy for cabi Stylists, our Opportunity International entrepreneurs receive tools and training in leadership, marketing, and sales, and have the relational support of mentors and peers, as we believe it is in community that women reach their greatest potential for success.

"Women are such relational creatures, and when they leverage community bonds as they build a business, those relationships can transform lives," said cabi Founder, President, and Chief Culture Officer Kimberly Inskeep. "This is as true for cabi Stylists as it is for the woman opening a dress shop in Rwanda, and this is how one woman can ultimately transform an entire community for generations to come."

As each small business loan is repaid, it ultimately turns into five loans over time, greatly extending the impact of each cabi Stylist. Beyond W.E. are cabi, small business loans are also funded through our Make a Change Program, where customers round their orders up to the nearest dollar and donate the change. Through unified efforts in our community, each year we support the businesses of thousands of women all over the world.

Because women have given generously over the years, the Foundation has donated over $44.5 million in clothing to communities around the world. To date, cabi Stylists have been integral in distributing clothing to women affected by natural disasters across the country through Heart of cabi Foundation events.

At cabi, we do not seek success success because it enables us to passionately care for the well-being of women across the globe-to do well in order to do good. Our living legacy is to be women entrepreneurs helping women entrepreneurs. United around that purpose, together we can feel the deep fulfillment of being difference-makers for women all over the world.

Our living legacy is to be women entrepreneurs helping women entrepreneurs.

HOW IT WORKS

NOT JUST "DIFFERENT" BUT ELEGANTLY DIFFERENT

Ensuring our pursuit of something different truly leads to something better.

by Kimberly Inskeep, cabi Founder, President & Chief Culture Officer

As the cabi team prepares for each season, we take considerable time to observe trends and current interests which might serve as valuable inspiration for those we'll connect with during the season. It was fun to reflect on how, for almost thirty seasons, we have found quite different forms of inspiration each time. And so, as we approached Fall '16, we were intrigued to find ourselves inspired by the very idea of "different" itself.

From our earliest days, the cabi team has determined to be remarkably different from the traditional world of fashion and retail, and this season, our Design and Marketing Teams once again proclaimed our distinctive differences through our Collection and the captivating setting of Tokyo, where it was brought to life.

Their pursuit of different inspired me to consider how that concept lives meaningfully in our day-to-day lives. Why are we drawn to different pursuits? Why are they important? Why do we resist them?

As I reflected, it was plain to see my life's greatest stories, adventures, growth times, and victories have all come through pursuing something markedly and unequivocally... different. Diving far outside my common experience, comfort, and natural abilities is what has shaped me.

And yet, not all things "different" bring value. Different for different's sake can quickly lose luster as the newness wears off, often causing us to jump to a new "different." Much time, money, and even relationships are thrown away as the result of one's unsatisfied quest for something different. I wince thinking back on those times in my own life when I quickly jumped from one "different" to another, impatient for the results I sought to achieve. Or, when I was on a track toward learning something totally different and worthwhile, but I all too quickly exchanged it for the security of sameness.

The fact is, there is something in each of our hearts that longs for tomorrow to be better than today. We long for different. Yet we know, deep down, it takes courage-and elegance (yes, elegance)—to make choices that truly engender a better life. It is fascinating that the Latin word for elegance, eligere, conveys the concept of "selection," suggesting elegance is not a projected air, but a lifestyle of carefully curated choices that add a value not previously present. It would seem, then, that the process of elegance is what gets us to that different we're really after.

Think about the time in your life when you chose a road to something better; you no doubt had to do something different, making it all the more important that your choice had been carefully curated. This is because while you were "doing different," it likely felt foreign, awkward, and anything-but-elegant for quite some time, and you may have been eager to find an off-ramp. And in these moments, it feels so much more elegant to cling to sameness and appear as though we have it all together. But, if we courageously live with the discomfort of pursuing something different for a time, we will uncover a deeper significance, a new strength, even a bigger world... and ultimately, the better life we are after.

For as we do elegantly different, we become elegantly different.
